Children Should Not be Allowed to Eat Chocolate

Imagine a colourful, tasty and sweet snack. A snack that isn't filled with artificial sugars and preservatives. Like me, you are probably dreaming of a delicious healthy treat like fruit salad. Did you know that fewer children are eating fresh fruit but instead choosing to eat chocolate? I strongly believe that children should not be allowed to eat chocolate.

Firstly, I encourage children not to eat chocolate because it lacks minerals and vitamins. As evidence, more children are choosing to eat unhealthy treats like chocolate rather than fruits and vegetables. In addition, people will often crave sugary treats like chocolate which can indicate they have a mineral deficiency.

Secondly, without a doubt children should not eat chocolate because it contains caffeine. Due to this, it can cause children to feel jittery and experience a rapid heart rate. Furthermore, the caffeine in chocolate can result in children having trouble sleeping at night.

Thirdly, children must not eat chocolate because it will damage their teeth. In fact, the sugar in chocolate has resulted in a higher number of cavities found amongst small children. Who likes going to the dentist?

In conclusion, there is no question that you should not let children eat chocolate because it lacks vitamin and minerals, contains caffeine not suitable for children and can damage your teeth. In my opinion, we should all stop eating chocolate!
